What is Family Promise of Jacksonville?

We are a network of people working together to provide homeless families with HELP for today and HOPE for tomorrow. We are a nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization affiliated with 168 other nonprofits across the country who share our mission.

We work with 19 local congregations and more than 800 volunteers who provide meals and shelter for the families. The families come to our day-center housed in the First United Methodist Church downtown every weekday and from there the children go to school and the parents go to work or job training. We provide intensive case management and work with other social service organizations to help parents become employed and manage their finances.

We opened our doors in June 2006 and since that time have helped more than 50 families get back into a home and provided more than 1,500 people with support services such as food, clothing, household items, furniture and bus tickets.
